On the Predictions and Definitions for the Post—Cold War Era

LIU De-bin

(, , 130012)

Abstract: The prediction and definition for the post—cold war era has been a sharp argument and one of the major unresolved issues in the academia. From the Three Bloc theory, Multipolar Balance of Powers model, to the controversial Clash of Civilizations and the development of Unipolar Moment, and to the Global Village, the scholars have been trying hard to end the post—cold war era with its redefinitions, but it still works and cannot be replaced so far. The reason for the situation is because the post—cold war world has been changing so rapidly and deeply that cannot be identified by a single angle or a single way.

Key words: Post—Cold War Era; International Relations; Prediction; Definition
